Motivational letter

by Gergana Karabelyova

Working in front end development has always been my dream. I started programming when I was 12. Back then I didn't even know I was programming. I made a forum for a German rock band that I loved. There were options to change the interface and looks of the forum if you go through the HTML code and change it. I didn't understand much, but I started seeing the "img src" tags and figured "Hey, this must be where the image is stored" and so on with colors, banners, sections etc :)

Later I got into an electronics high school and graduated with the best marks in my class. I also started making little low-class Windows programs for fun. I made a "Lucky 7" game program, one that makes calculations on how much oxygen gets produced by trees, calculators, a funny game "Programmer VS Integral" where you change rounds with an Integral and beat each other until one of you runs out of health and so on. I also made a couple of websites for topics that I liked. None of them reached the actual Internet and remained only as projects on my computer. One of them was about planets and the universe, one about Norse gods and one of them was like a portfolio of my Adobe Photoshop graphics.

I got in and graduated the UNIBIT university this year (July 2017) with "Computer science" and I am currently looking to start my first job in the IT sector. My graduation project to get my diploma was an ASP.NET website with a database made in MySQL Workbench. I also used HTML, CSS and Adobe Photoshop to further develop the project. The graduation commission loved my work and marked it very high.

Now I apply for front end jobs only because this is where I want to develop myself and this is what I like doing. I don't have any actual work experience yet, but I believe that with my creativity, positivity and need to learn, I can be a great front end developer and also a great asset to any team of programmers.

Thank you for taking the time to read my letter.

Sincerely yours,
